VERY IMPORTANT TRANSFER

Local Business Property Sold to Official of Soo Railroad—May be Something Doing.

A real estate deal was closed today which may be second in importance only to the new division terminals to be located here by the Soo line. Deeds were placed on record conveying a total of twelve lots in the business part of the city, with a frontage of 150 feet on Main street and the same frontage on both sides of Normal avenue. Those who disposed of their property were H. & J. D. Curran, Loeb & Hammel and J. P. Malick. The Curran property consists of six lots and comprises the site for many years occupied by the Curran House, which building was ruined by fire upwards of a year ago. The other property is located just north on Normal avenue, the corner piece being occupied by Max Wirth's stable and the lots to the west are now covered with ice houses. Loeb & Hammel transfer a tract 100x132 ft. The purchaser mentioned in the various deeds is Chas. G. Sturtevant, a stranger here, but he is presumed to represent the Soo railroad company. Just what uses will be made of the property is not known, but several have ventured the guess that it will be covered with storage and commission houses, which will be leased at a nominal sum.

'TWAS A FINE PROGRAM

Literary and Musical Features at Saturday's Meeting of Woman's Club Were Very Good.

Mrs. F. N. Spindler, who had charge of the literary features at last Saturday afternoon's meeting of the Woman's Club, has reason to feel gratified at the success of the program, which was enjoyed by nearly 100 members of the club and their friends. The social features were under the direction of Mrs. C. C. Conlisk as chairman, and included the serving of ice cream and assorted cakes. Mrs. W. W. Gregory arranged the musical program, in which she was assisted by Mrs. W. B. Buckingham. The several numbers included a duet by Mrs. Gregory and Miss Jessie Hill, with Miss Blanche Hill as accompanist, and a solo by Miss Millicent Olin.

One of the most enjoyable and instructive talks ever given at the club was by Miss Nannie R. Gray, who told of her recent visit to Oberammergau and gave a vivid description of the celebrated Passion Play, which has been "put on" in that Tyrolean village every ten years for several centuries. Miss Gray's talk was all too brief, but the ladies expect to hear from her again at no distant date.

"American Celebrities in Art" was the title of a gifted paper prepared and read by Mrs. J. A. Ennor. In the line of art Mrs. Ennor is exceptionally well versed and she has the ability to transcribe her thoughts so that they both entertain and instruct.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Saturday evening, Dec. 3rd, beginning at 8 o'clock, when J. Roe Pfiffner will tell about "The Wisconsin University and Higher Education." This will be an open meeting and it is expected that each member of the club will invite one or more friends. The gentlemen will be especially welcome at this time.

A Season With the Circus.

Arndt Augustad has finished another season's work as hippodrome rider with Ringling Bros.' circus and returned home the latter part of last week. The show opened in Chicago last April, thence going west to the Dakotas and south through Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and way down to Florida. The closing performance was given at West Point, Miss., after which the outfit was shipped to winter quarters at Baraboo, Wis. During an evening performance at Watertown, S. Dak., a tornado demolished the tents and played general havoc, but fortunately no one was killed or badly hurt. Arndt had just entered the dressing room tent, which fell upon him, but he escaped without injury. The hottest day of the season was one Sunday at La Crosse. Mr. Augustad may devote several weeks to vaudeville work before rejoining the circus at Madison Square Garden, New York, next March.

Wisconsin Supreme in Flax.

Now that flax has passed the $2.50 mark the readers of this paper will appreciate the fact that in 1909 Wisconsin led her nearest competitor, Montana, 2½ bushels per acre and the largest producer, North Dakota, over 5 bushels per acre. In 1909 Wisconsin led her nearest competitor, Montana, by 4½ bushels per acre, and the largest producer, North Dakota, by 7 bushels. In 1909 (latest available figures) Wisconsin beat the average of the United States 5.1 bushels or $6.88 per acre, based on farm price December 1, 1909. Based on present price, November 14, 1910, ($2.68 per bushel) this would be $13.66 per acre more than the average.

Good Things to Eat.

Pop corn that will pop, big red apples, cranberries, hickory nuts, celery, candied cherries and pineapple, dates, figs, nuts, marshmallows, layer raisins, Saratoga chips, olives, grapes, grapefruit, oranges, bananas, maple leaf and pimento cheese, nabisco, frow and dominoes in bulk, also coast sealed oysters, all at Murray's, telephone 58.

Lecture Friday Evening.

Mr. Goffe, Wisconsin superintendent of the Sheldon University, who lectures on subjects that are of benefit to business men, manufacturers, salesmen, clerks and everyone interested in advancing self development, will speak at the Library hall, for the second time, next Friday evening, commencing at 8:15 sharp. All interested are cordially invited to be present, and they certainly will be well repaid for their time and trouble.

Beaten by His Friends.

An analysis of the tabular statement of the November election, published on the third page of The Gazette, shows that at least one of the Democratic candidates for office was beaten by his friends, or those whom he could reasonably expect to vote for him. A. J. Kubisiak, candidate for register of deeds, is the gentleman referred to. In 1908 the Democratic vote in Dewey, Hull, Sharon, Stockton and the 4th ward of this city totaled 1,102, while the number of votes polled for Mr. Kubisiak was 819, a difference of 283. As Mr. Wyatt's majority this year was only 278, it will be seen that if a full vote were gotten out this year in the places mentioned, the gentleman from Fancher would have been elected. We cite the four towns and ward above for the reason that a big majority of the voters in those precincts are of Polish nationality and therefore would be expected to support the Kubisiak candidacy.

Conductor on Velvet Special.

Chas. B. Baker, one of the oldest employees of the Wisconsin Central and its successor, the Soo line, has been promoted from freight conductor on the Portage branch to take charge of one of the Velvet special trains now running between Chicago and Duluth. Until the division changes are made Mr. Baker's run will be from Chicago to Abbotsford. He begins his new duties tomorrow night.

FARM AND CITY PROPERTY

Several Transfers Made by and Through the Sellers Agency Within a Few Days.

What has long been known as the Butterfield farm, located at the southeastern limits of the city and just below the Soo right-of-way, was sold this week by E. W. Sellers to Lorenze Thelen of Milwaukee, who will take possession next spring and continue to operate it as a truck farm. The land comprises 94 acres. Among the other deals just completed by Mr. Sellers is the purchase of two farms of 160 acres each in the northwest corner of Adams county. This property was bought from H. A. J. Hagar of Big Flats. Mr. Sellers has sold to O. H. Baerman of Milwaukee a farm of 40 acres in Hull township, about four miles northeast of this city. Mr. Baerman and family will move to their new home within the next few months and engage in truck farming.

A house and lot at the corner of Portage and North First streets has been sold by Emery Harbaugh of Hinsdale, Mich., to Boleslaw Rogowski for a consideration of $1,000. Mr. Harbaugh has been here for several days and closed the deal through the Southwick-Sellers agency.

E. W. Sellers is now the owner of the Mrs. Mary C. O'Brien property at 502 Jefferson street, consisting of a house and lot. The place is now occupied by Mrs. Rose McCullum and family, but as soon as they vacate, numerous repairs and improvements will be made and the property offered for rent or sale.

Three sets of buildings which are or have been located on the property recently purchased by the Soo R. R. Co. for division purposes, have been sold to E. W. Sellers, who will move the structures to other parts of the city.

High School Notes.

Last Friday evening the Seniors were given a reception by the domestic science girls.

All the English classes have been asked for contributions to the literary department of the Nooz.

The football team will have their picture taken next week. It will be placed in the Christmas number of the Nooz.

To celebrate the fact that we have won the Valley championship, a supper and reception will be given at the High school this evening.

The following teachers will leave for their Thanksgiving vacation: Mr. Baldauf to Ogdensburg, Mr. Hammond to Kalamazoo, Mich., Miss Smithies to Wausau, Miss Rice to Portage and Milwaukee.

Besides the team, a large crowd of students and teachers attended the game at Grand Rapids. They left in rigs, arriving at Grand Rapids about noon. They left there about 7 in the evening. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the trip and as the weather was not cold it made an enjoyable ride.

The following students and teachers went down: Mr. Baldauf, Misses Smithies, Dunning and Means, Simon Reth, Rex Rosenow, Nicholas Gross, Alf Anderson, Merle Fischer, Myron Edwards, Fred Knope, Forest Sellers, Herbert Neitzel, Harold Uie, Michael Welch, Allen Eddy, Kathryn Glennon, Grace Glennon, Violet Fischer, Margaret Trowbridge, Frances Fallon, Grace McCullum, Lillian Thomas, Myrna Jensen, Ella Meyer, Clarence Cheasick and Art Willett.

Change in Rural Carriers.

Arthur Hawley has received an appointment as a regular rural mail carrier, succeeding Clyde Vaughn, who resigned several weeks ago and whose substitute the former has been since. Mr. Hawley will take charge of route 5, which has heretofore been covered by Frank Maddy, and the latter will distribute notes of love, tributes most endearing, messages of importance and news the latest on route No. 3, over on the west side of the great Wisconsin.

Five Miles of Track Laid.

Work is now practically completed on five of the new tracks being laid for Soo division terminals in this city, each of which is about a mile in length. The several other lines are being put down by a big crew and the job may be completed early in December. The outer walls of the roundhouse are now up and the roof will be put on within a few days. A delay in moving the division here from Abbotsford may be caused by the non-arrival of the new 75-foot turntable, but this will leave the factory in New York Dec. 1st and is expected to reach Stevens Point ten or twelve days later. When the new one comes, the 60-foot table now in use will be shipped to Spencer.

Subscriptions Towards Hospital.

While very little active work is being done at present toward soliciting subscriptions for the new hospital, which will surely be built in this city next season, voluntary subscriptions are being received by members of the community nearly every day and among the latest to offer its contribution is the Brown Bros. Lumber Co. of Rhinelander. Messrs. Brown were early day residents of Stevens Point and still have a very kindly feeling for our city and its people. The sale last Thursday evening will add a trifle over $50 to the fund, which amount may be contributed toward furnishing a room. The hospital committee are anxiously waiting for the various persons who have signified a wish to give towards the hospital fund, but have not as yet stated the amount of their subscription.

YOUNG BOY KILLS SELF THEIR ANNUAL BANQUET

Anton Cera, Jr., of Stockton, Meets With Sad Accident Saturday—Dies Without Regaining Consciousness.

The fourth annual banquet of Stevens Point Council, No. 1170, Knights of Columbus, was enjoyed by about one hundred and fifty people, including the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Stephen church and the fair waiters, who assisted in serving, at Rothman's hall, last Wednesday evening. The menu, served in three courses, had been prepared in a most palatable manner and was greatly enjoyed. Choice selections were furnished during the dinner hour by Weber's orchestra and also at intervals during the program that followed, as well as for the dancing party that closed one of the most pleasant gatherings of the season.

Chas. H. Cashin acted as toastmaster and complimented the lecturer, F. J. Blood, and his committee for the successful manner in which they had arranged the details, and the ladies for their sumptuous repast. He then introduced Dr. D. S. Rice, the first Grand Knight of the Council, to whom special credit is due for its organization, and who made an excellent and finely worded address of welcome. A piano solo by Miss Mary Colline called for an encore, to which she responded with another artistic number and then Rev. J. J. Brennan of Wausau was introduced. The title of the reverend gentleman's subject was announced as "The Awakening of the American Conscience, or Twentieth Century Struggles," but owing to the length of the program, the speaker contented himself with a little wit at the expense of some present, and in briefly calling attention to some of the political and social evils and troubles of the present time, including divorce and race suicide, socialism, education without representation, etc., and said that he would be pleased to visit the city later and deliver his lecture in full, which would cover an hour or more. Father Brennan is a pleasing speaker and deservedly popular in his home city. Father Mortell of Waupaca made a short address and was followed by D. J. Leahy, to whom was assigned the subject, "The Ladies," without which a banquet is never complete. He concluded his pleasing talk with the quotation, which he said should be correctly punctuated, "Woman, without her, man would be a savage." In the absence of Judge Blewett of Fond du Lac, to whom had been assigned the toast, "The Knights of Columbus," but who could not attend on account of illness in his family, D. I. Sicksteel was called upon and told of the order, its purposes and objects, the good work it is doing in the communities wherever organized. The banquet closed by all singing, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," when the floor was cleared for dancing.

Pay Employees in Script.

At Bessemer, Mich., employees and officials have for the last three months been paid in city "scrip," bearing interest at 6 per cent.

Several thousand dollars of it is issued every month, signed by the mayor and clerk, though the issuing of the paper, it is said, is in violation of the city's charter, and payment may be stopped by any taxpayer.

However, the banks, merchants and others take it and appear to have no objection to it.

COUNTY BOARD DOINGS

Various Matters Transacted by the Supervisors Within the Past Week.

On Friday the board appointed a committee consisting of Supervisors Ben Halverson, G. L. Park and J. O. Foxen to negotiate a loan with which to refund the county's bonded indebtedness, consisting of $100,000 of railroad bonds issued to the Wisconsin Central, and which became due Jan. 1st, 1912. As the county has not created a fund with which to meet the indebtedness, a loan must be secured and if possible at a lower rate of interest than is now being paid, 5 per cent. The committee will endeavor to get the money from the state, and pay it back in installments of $10,000 annually with interest.

The total disbursements made by the Soldiers' Relief Commission during the past fiscal year amounted to $29,99, and they have a balance on hand of $17,95. The disbursements were as follows: Adam Boyer, none; candidates on the Social Democratic county ticket, none; C. H. Cashin, $6.50; A. E. Bourn, $39.50; D. W. Sawyer, $5.00; Frank H. Timm, $37.75; H. D. Boston, $5.00; Anton J. Kubisiak, $36.00; A. F. Wyatt, $278.71; J. B. Dawley, in the primary, $17.00; A. L. Smongeski, in the primary, $33.20.

Statements must be filed not later than Dec. 8th.

TWO CRIMINAL CASES

Treason and Desertion Are Charges Brought Against Prominent Local Citizens—One is Acquitted.

There was a jolly time at last Monday evening's meeting of Washington Council, J. O. U. A. M. Under the heading of "good of the order," F. H. Patterson was placed on trial, charged with treason, and a determined effort was made to convict him by the prosecuting attorney. Some of the evidence was very strong, but the jurors probably took into consideration that Frank is an all-around good fellow and accordingly brought in a verdict for acquittal.

The next case on the criminal calendar was that against F. B. Gano, whose trial was on the charge of deserting his family. Mr. Gano failed to put up a satisfactory defense and upon conviction was sentenced to a term of six months. The defendant thereupon filed a notice of appeal and will be temporarily out on bonds. A young man named Morrill was one of the star witnesses during the evening, but as he was unable to talk or understand the English language, it was necessary to hear his testimony thru the aid of an interpreter. Chas. Dako performed this strenuous duty to the satisfaction of all present, but his hands and arms were undoubtedly lame before the last question was answered.

Refreshments were served and cigars enjoyed. There was also a program of vocal and instrumental music. The evening was one of the pleasantest given by the local council and all present hope that it may soon be repeated.

DAILY FREIGHT TRAIN EACH WAY.

It is now reasonably certain that the north bound local freight train on the Soo line will leave Stevens Point every morning except Sunday at 6 o'clock, so that passengers board for Wausau, Merrill and other points along the Valley road will have ample time to transfer at Junction City. A change in schedule, or more properly, an additional train was put on last Monday. Heretofore one crew has been expected to make the round trip between Stevens Point and Abbotsford each day, but under the new arrangement No. 38 will pull out of Abbotsford at about the same hour. Conductor Keys and the south bound train, known as No. 38, will pull out of Abbotsford at about the same hour. Conductor Keys is temporarily in charge of the new train.

THE CHRISTMAS CAMPAIGN

Red Cross Seals to be on Sale in Every City in Wisconsin, Commencing Next Monday.

Monday, November 28th, is the date set for the opening of the 1910 Red Cross Christmas seal campaign, by which means the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association hopes to replenish its working fund and continue in 1911 the battle against tuberculosis waged so aggressively during 1910.

Red Cross seals will be placed on sale in every city, town and village in Wisconsin. The price is one cent each. It is a handsome sticker, printed in holiday colors, green and red, and bids a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Every penny derived from the sale will be devoted to fighting consumption. Already 350 enthusiastic citizens in as many towns have come forward to superintend the sale and from fifteen to twenty are being added to the list of local campaign managers daily. A local manager is wanted in every community.

The Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association is out to double the great record made last year, when 2,300,000 stickers were disposed of. This gave Wisconsin the world's record for the largest sale in proportion to population. All of the other states in the Union are working to beat Wisconsin's record and it is certain that this state will have to double its sale this year to prevent defeat.

The Red Cross seal is well worth a penny as an ornamental holiday greeting sticker but its greatest value lies in the fact that it is a message of hope to all the world in the battle against consumption, and that the penny paid for it will be used to help wipe tuberculosis out of Wisconsin. Every piece of mail and every package and gift sent during the campaign should bear a Red Cross seal. The campaign ends on Christmas day.

How the Course Helps.

A short course graduate of the class of 1896 visited the college the other day. When he completed the course he went to Pennsylvania to work in a big livestock breeding establishment. At the end of the first week the proprietor told him that his services were worth $25 a month with board. The practical training secured in the short course enabled him to advance readily as a stockman until now he is superintendent of one of the largest estates in the east at a salary of $2,650 a year, with house, garden and driving team furnished.

Wisconsin is full of boys who found the short course the opening to greater success in farming. One graduated ten years ago and is now a seed grain grower of national reputation handling over $10,000 worth of seeds a year. Another was a farm hand at $20 a month five years ago and now operates a stock farm with a net income of over $2,000 a year. Many others have returned to their home farms to put the old place on a paying basis. It pays to study how to farm right.

FELL DEAD TO GROUND

Anton Dulak, Well Known New Hope Farmer, Died From Heart Trouble Friday Forenoon.

Anton Dulak, a well known farmer from the town of New Hope, drove to the city last Friday morning, accompanied by his wife. They reached here at about 10 o'clock and shortly before 11 o'clock drove to the residence of Adam Adams, 213 Mill street, to sell some geese. Mr. Adams took the geese and started into the house to weigh them, Dulak walking back toward his buggy. He was in the act of making an entry in a note book that he carried in his hand, when without uttering a word, he dropped to the ground and expired in a few moments. Dr. von Neupert, Jr., was hastily summoned, but the man was dead before his arrival. The body was carried into the Adams residence and thenceforth to the Kamrowski undertaking rooms, where it was prepared for burial and removed to the home in New Hope.

Mr. Dulak was one of the best known farmers in the eastern part of the county and was highly respected by neighbors and acquaintances. He was 44 years of age and is survived by a wife and seven children, the youngest only a few weeks old, besides a number of brothers and sisters. His sudden death was a most severe shock to his wife, who was seated in their buggy when Dulak fell to the ground, barely missing one of the front wheels. Death was the result of heart disease, he having been subject to attacks of palpitation of the heart, and complained of not feeling well that morning.

The funeral took place from the Polish Catholic church at Polonia, Monday morning, Rev. T. Mankowski officiating. Joseph T. Busby, proprietor of Busby's Hotel, Blue Mound road, Milwaukee, and Henry Fiege, a well known traveling man and wholesaler, were Stevens Point visitors on Thursday.

She holds responsible position as stenographer in the office of a prominent advertising agency in Chicago.

The Strike is Over.

The strike of the expressmen in New York having been settled, we are now able to supply our patrons with the genuine blue points. During the strike, for the past two weeks, we were unable to receive shipments of oysters through New York, with any certainty of having them when needed.

On account of this we have been obliged to furnish our trade with Connecticut standards, which are a very good oyster when handled with the Sealshipt system, but many of our customers who have learned to know what the delicious blue points are, noticed and spoke of the differences in flavor, and will be glad to know that they can again obtain their favorite oyster.

Over 5,500 Students.

That the total number of students at the University of Wisconsin this year will exceed 5,500 is indicated by the new directory in press. Now 3,902 are enrolled in addition to 130 dairy students, just entered, and nearly 500 short course students who come on December 1.

The increase is over 400, or nearly 12 per cent. beyond the enrollment last year at the same time.

The greatest increase is in the college of agriculture, which has grown from 330 in the two and four year courses to 560 this year, a gain of over 48 per cent. This is exclusive of the dairy course and the short course in agriculture.

The course in home economics has nearly doubled in attendance, 95 young women being enrolled as compared with 48 last year.

In the courses in journalism there are 109 students, an increase of over 50 per cent. The course in commerce has 310, a gain of over 35 per cent. The pharmacy course has grown from 37 to 47.

The freshman class numbers 1,079, the sophomore class 868, the junior class 773, the senior class 604.

LEARN BETTER FARMING

Local Young Men Will Attend the Short Course in Agriculture at State University Next Month.

A delegation of Portage county boys are planning to enter the short course in agriculture, which opens December 3, at the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin at Madison. Those who will attend for the second year are B. N. Williamson, Amherst Junction; A. J. Lobrig, New Hope; A. Brakke, Rosolt.

The studies in the short course offered this year are better than ever before and a greater variety of subjects will be given. The principal courses in live stock husbandry, farm crops, soils, horticulture, farm dairying, veterinary science and chemistry will be given much the same as in previous years. The new courses in poultry raising will be better than when first given last year owing to the increased equipment and flocks of the poultry department. The courses in farm management and farm accounts will be much improved and will include new material.

A feature of the short course work

Last Thursday morning Geo. Mehne and John Rich were digging a well upon Lock Frost's farm in the town of Almond and while Mehne was at work at the bottom of the well, at a depth of about 80 feet, the bucket in which sand was being hauled to the top slipped from its hook and alighted on Mr. Mehne's head, striking him just above the eye. His skull was fractured and concussion of the brain followed.

He died yesterday morning. He was about 27 years of age and a young wife to whom he was married last spring, survives him.

Last Friday afternoon as Jacob Childs of Amherst was hunting in the woods in the town of New Hope, he found a human skeleton, which was afterwards identified as that of Ole Saether, a former resident of this city.

About three years ago Saether was sent to the Northern Hospital at Oshkosh, remaining there about one year, when he escaped and came back to this city.

As he was deemed harmless, he was not returned to that institution. About a year ago he went to live at the home of an uncle, Alex Foss, in the town of New Hope, remaining there a few weeks, when one day he left the house and in a note stated that he was going away to die. This was the last seen of Saether, although searching parties scoured the country for a trace of him.

The skeleton was found about three quarters of a mile from the Foss home, in a secluded part of the woods, and a revolver lying a few feet away from the remains, together with a small hole in the front part of the skull, showed that he undoubtedly had taken his own life. He was about 40 years of age and is survived by a widow and three or four children in this city.

Blue Points—The Proper Oyster.
All oysters are good by nature and all are worth eating; yet there is always one particular kind in every food product that excels—always one that is spoken of, judged by and compared to.

Hence it follows that while all oysters are good, some are better than others, and the acme of oyster perfection is fully acknowledged in Blue Point Oysters.

To the millions of people who thru National Publicity and safety in handling, through the very natural deliciousness of the oyster itself—relish them, the superiority of Blue Points is beginning to be known.

And when your epicure, the frequenter of hotels and restaurants, dines, he knows and insists upon having Blue Points. He knows they have a quality and flavor all their own—distinctive characteristics which for the past sixty years emphasize the higher goodness of Blue Points over ordinary oysters.

In Great South Bay the conditions for oyster raising are ideal. The bay is a section of the Atlantic protected on the seaward side by low beaches, through openings in which the tides continually ebb and flow. A constant supply of pure cold salt water, fresh from the great Atlantic, is assured.

Around the shores of Great South Bay are no cities or factories, and no rivers pour their flood of contaminated water into the bay. Watering the stock is impossible, as all the waters around are the same saline content as that in which Blue Points thrive. The little fresh water that enters is from small streams fed by springs in the immediate vicinity of the shore.

But besides all this, there is something more that gives Blue Points their delectable flavor; something intangible but real in the surroundings and conditions, just as there are certain favored spots where alone grapes can be grown to produce the finest wines.

In this region so favored by nature, oyster culture reaches perfection in the highest sense.

Genuine Blue Point Oysters are grown in but one place in the whole world—Great South Bay, off the south shore of Long Island. You cannot get Blue Points from any other places any more than you can get grapes from thistles.

At the present time at least, the only place where these oysters can be bought in Stevens Point is at the store of H.D. McCulloch Co.

What the Kidneys Do.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood [in] the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

"F. C. Holman, 418 Dixon street, Stevens Point, Wis., says: "An injury to my kidneys was the cause of my kidney complaint. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I used them and they brought me such great benefit that I was convinced of their merits. I take pleasure in recommending this preparation."

THE DARK GETHSEMANE HOUR
Matthew 26:36-40—November 20
"The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners."—V. 45.

HFTER the Master and his disciples, as Jews, had celebrated the Passover Supper and after he had subsequently instituted the Memorial of his death with the bread and the cup, and after Judas had gone out to betray him, Jesus and the remaining eleven left the upper room in Jerusalem, crossed the city to the gate and thence crossed the Valley Kedron and ascended the sloping side of Mt. Olivet toward the Garden of Gethsemane. The word Gethsemane signifies oil-press. Tradition has it that this Garden belonged to the family of which the Apostles John and James were members, and that for this reason the Lord and his disciples were privileged to feel themselves at home there. St. Mark, the writer of one of the Gospels, but not one of the Apostles, is credited with having been a member of the same family. One of the accounts of the arrest of the Master tells that amongst those who followed after him was a young man wrapped with a sheet and who fled naked when some members of the band attempted to lay hold of him. That young man, tradition says, years afterwards was known as St. Mark.

The Journey to Gethsemane

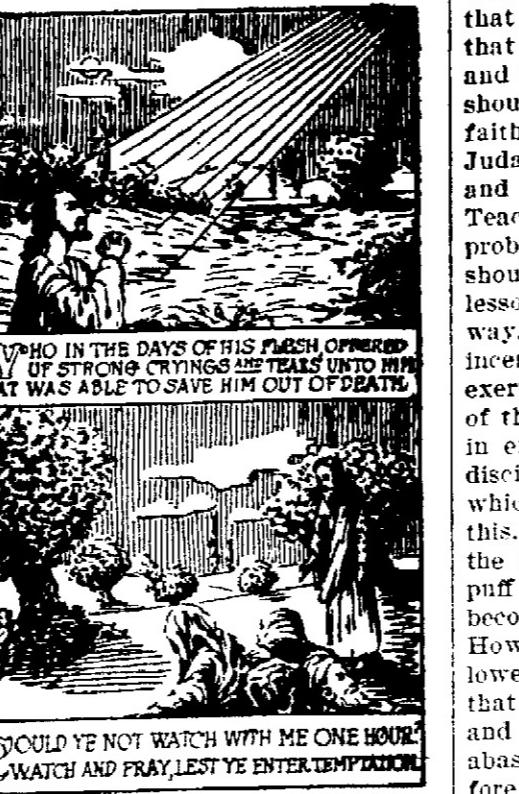

This was the most memorable night of the Master's experience. He knew perfectly the meaning of every feature of the Passover. He knew that he was the Lamb of God, antitypically, whose death was to be accomplished on the following day by crucifixion. Yet his thoughts were for his dear disciples. He must give them final words of encouragement and instruction. And so he did. Three chapters of St. John's Gospel record the incidents of the intervening time between the leaving of the upper room and the arriving at Gethsemane, the place of the oil-press. "In him was life"—uncontaminated, because he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners; his life came not from Adam.

He knew that in his perfection he had a right to life, if he would live in perfect accordance with the Divine requirements. But he knew also that he would send the Spirit of Truth to be their Comforter and it would show them things to come. In the fifteenth chapter he gave them the parable of the Vine and the Branches and assured them that no longer should they be servants, but friends. "For all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." In the sixteenth chapter he explained to them that persecutions must be expected, if they would share his sufferings and be prepared to share his glory.

A little while and they would not see him; then again a little while and they would see him. The entire period of his absence, from the Divine standpoint, as compared to eternity, would be but a little while. Then, by virtue of the resurrection "change," they would see him, because made like him. "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." These things I have given unto you that in me ye might have peace." In the 17th chapter is recorded his wonderful

His disciples and followers loved him dearly. Still he was alone, because he alone had been begotten of the holy Spirit. His followers could not feel so blessed nor be spirit-begotten until after his sacrifice had been finished nor until he would appear in the presence of God for them to apply his merit imputedly to them, to permit them to join with him sacrificially in the sufferings of this present time, that they might share with him also in the glories to follow.

St. Peter, referring to the foregoing experience of our Lord, declares that he offered up strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death and was heard in respect to that which he feared. Why did he fear? Do not all humanity face death, and some of them with great courage and some with bravado? Ah, there is a vast difference between the Master's standpoint and ours as respects death. We were born dying. We never knew perfect life. We have always known that there is no escape from death. It was different with him. His experiences on the spirit plane before coming into the world were all in association with life, perfection of life.

"In him was life"—uncontaminated, because he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners; his life came not from Adam.

He knew that in his perfection he had a right to life, if he would live in perfect accordance with the Divine requirements. But he knew also that he would send the Spirit of Truth to be their Comforter and it would show them things to come. Judas the Ungrateful Apostle
The world is full of sadly disappointing characters. In many things we all fall. Selfishness, meanness, perversity, pride, etc., mark the human family most woefully. But withal can anyone find anything more reprehensible than the ingratitude which betrays his best friend?

The world is of one opinion respecting such characters as that of Judas. And although he is a noted example, he is by no means an exception; there are many. Some of them live today. But whoever can see the meanness of such a disposition with a reasonably good focus will surely be saved from manifesting such a character, however mean might be his disposition. The man who could sell his Master for thirty pieces of silver is justly in contempt with all humanity. Nor was it merely the thirty pieces that influenced the ingratitude. Rather it was pride. He had thought to be associated with the Master in an earthly throne. He had set his faith upon this expectation. Now that same Master explained more fully that the throne was not yet in sight; that it belongs to an age to follow this, and was to be given only to those who should prove themselves loyal and faithful unto death. In the mind of Judas the matter took not the wisest and best way. Holding the Great Teacher in contempt, the deceived one probably intended that the delivery should be merely a temporary one—a lesson to the Master not to talk that way, not to carry matters too far—an incentive to him, compelling him to exert his power for the resistance of those who sought his life and thus, in exalting himself, make good to his disciples the share in the Kingdom which he had promised or, failing of this, to wreck the entire project. Alas, the love of money, the love of power puff up and make delirious some who become intoxicated with ambition. How necessary that all the Lord's followers remember the message, "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted and he that exalteth himself shall be abased!" Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time" (I Peter v, 6).

Henty As An Inventor.

The Author's Reversible Boat That Was a Halfway Success.

George Henty, the author of boys' stories, is described in "Sixty Years in the Wilderness," by Henry W. Lucy, as the warmest hearted, shortest tempered man in the world.

"Before he found his true vocation in writing boys' books Henty tried various methods of supplementing his salary as a violator of Divine law. Could it be possible that in anything, even slightly, he had taken to himself the honor due to the Father? Could it be possible that in any degree he had held back, even in his mind, from full obedience to the Father's will? Did this crucifixion as a criminal possibly mean the loss of Divine favor? Was it necessary that he should die thus? Might not this cup of ignominy pass? So he prayed in a great agony. And although the older Greek manuscripts do not contain the statement that he sweat great drops of blood, medical science tells us that such an experience would not have been at all impossible in a nervous, strained, mental agony. But we note the beautiful simplicity of the statement with which his prayer concluded—"Nevertheless, my Father, not my will, but thy will, be done."

How childlike and beautiful the faith and trust, even amidst strenuous agitation! St. Paul says that he was heard in the thing which he feared. How? God's answer came by angelic hands. An angel appeared and ministered to him—ministered to his necessity. "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation?" (Hebrews i, 14.) We are not informed in what words this heavenly ministry was expressed to the Master in his lowliness and sorrow, but we do know that it must have been with full assurance of the Heavenly Father's favor and sympathy and love. He was heard in respect to the things which he feared. He received the assurance that he was well-pleasing to the Father; that he had been faithful to his Covenant, and that he would have the resurrection promised.

Behold the Lamb of God

From that moment onward the Master was the calmest of all who had any association with the great events of that night and the following day.

Officers, servants, Sanhedrin, priests,

Herod and his men of war, Pilate and his soldiers, and the shouting multitude—all were excited, all were distressed.

Jesus only was calm. This was because he had the Father's assurance that all was well between them.

As this blessed assurance gave the Master courage, so his followers since have found that, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" If we have the peace of God ruling in our hearts, it is beyond all human comprehension.

Stories of the Gravediggers.

Grimly humorous is the tale of the Scottish gravedigger who complained that he did not get constant work.

"But, George," said the minister, "if you were to be constantly employed in the duties of the office you would soon bury the whole parish."

"That might be, sir, but how am I to keep a wife and family unless I get regular work?" "Deed, sir, I haven't buried a leavin' soul for the last six weeks."

Harder still was the case of another gravedigger who was asked to reduce his fee for digging a grave because,

"mind ye, James, she was an auld woman and was sair spent."

CAUGHT THE COINER.

An Accident Spoiled an Ingenious Counterfeit Passing Scheme.

A case which shows the ingenuity used in passing counterfeit coin is the following: A tailor, who also was a very successful coiner, had a little daughter who was some ten years old. She was being taught to play the violin, and twice a week she went to have a music lesson at a house about a mile distant. Once a week the innocent little thing carried besides her violin case and violin a package cunningly secreted in the false bottom of the violin case, which contained some twenty or more pieces of counterfeit coin.

The music master, a rogue who was in the know, found no difficulty in abstracting the package unnoticed by the child and in his turn passed it on to a woman "fence," who again gave it to a male friend, who delivered it safely to the "utterer," a woman again, at a street corner, the package being this time concealed in the false bottom of a canary cage. Thus it passed through six hands, and besides the man himself only the music master knew who manufactured the coin.

The tailor was caught by an accident. His little girl let the violin case fall in the street, the bottom of the case was smashed, and all the coins, done up in tissue paper, fell into the street. The child, much mystified, opened one of the little packages, and the glitter caught a policeman's eye. This mishap led to the instant arrest of the tailor, who confessed, hoping for a light sentence, a hope which was not realized. Among the coiner's stock in trade were discovered two works on chemistry, fourteen molds, two batteries, plaster of paris, two ladles, a melting pot, crucibles and a quantity of chemicals.—London Telegraph.

Not Sorry for Blunder.

"Get up, my son," she said. "We have a clew to the thief."

I sprang out of bed, dressed and after swallowing a cup of coffee went to the factory. When Mr. Humber saw me he looked relieved.

"I thought you had failed me," he said.

I told him the story of my going to sleep on watch. Then I added:

"My sister found a clew in the pocket of the coat last night after I went to bed. She will not trust me with it after my carelessness last night, but says she will give it to any one you may send for it."

"I'll go myself," he said. "Come, show me the way."

I led him to my home, and a few moments later Maggie came down with a bit of white folded paper in her hand.

"Last night," she said to Mr. Humber, "after my brother had gone to bed I instinctively took up the coat and examined it thoroughly, thrusting my hand in every pocket successively. When from the right lower pocket, where he tells me the package was placed, I withdrew my hand I noticed a hair that had been caught between two of my fingers. Here it is."

She opened the paper very carefully and showed him the hair. It was a fiery red.

"Good," said Mr. Humber. "I think that you might as well have shown me the thief."

He refolded the paper about the half and went back to the factory.

Mr. Humber told me that I had been instrumental in saving the concern $2,000 and at the same time proved my honesty. He also said that the service would be recognized in time, but not till the thief had been discovered. Ten days later one of the clerks in his department with red hair was arrested. Sufficient auxiliary proof had been obtained to fix the guilt upon him. He finally confessed the theft, but as it was his first offense he was not prosecuted. I was given his place at a good salary.

"And likewise for cattes, if there be any nigh unto any house or houses visited with sickness. It is ordered that the cattes shall forthwith be killed in all such places." An exception was made in favor of any "dogge of accompte." Such a one was allowed to be kept if "kennelled or tied up or led in a lease."—Chicago News.

CHICAGO FAVORS SAN FRANCISCO

Golden Gate City Endorsed For Holding Panama Exposition.

STRONG RESOLUTION ADOPTED

Action of National Business League of America in Support of the California City as the Most Desirable Place to Celebrate the Completion of the Panama Canal Bound to Exert a Wide Influence.

The business men of Chicago are for San Francisco as the most desirable site for the exposition to celebrate the completion of the Panama canal in 1915. The National Business League of America, on Oct. 7, adopted a resolution endorsing San Francisco and this action by such an influential body of representative business men is bound to exert wide influence throughout the middle west and the east.

This endorsement, following closely on the failure of New Orleans to secure a Chicago endorsement is particularly pleasing to San Francisco. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The Panama canal will, when completed, unite the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans and create new opportunities for the advancement of American commerce; and,

"Whereas, The citizens of San Francisco, in the state of California, United States of America, have publicly declared their intention of holding an international exposition in the year 1915, under the title 'The Panama-Pacific International Exposition,' to fittingly celebrate the completion of the Panama canal; and,

"Whereas, The Pacific coast has an equable and healthful climate, and San Francisco has every modern facility for the comfort and entertainment of a large concourse of people, with ample opportunity for side trips to other coast cities; and,

"Whereas, By any route, a pilgrimage to the Pacific coast would be through scenes of beauty and grandeur unrivaled in any other part of the world, the trip to the exposition should be made, at least one way, by a route through the Panama canal, in order that visitors and the world at large may become familiar with that wonderful achievement; therefore, be it

"Resolved By the Board of Directors of the National Business League of America, that San Francisco be, and hereby is, strongly recommended as the proper site for the proposed exposition; and the board further recommends that a line of communications passenger steamers be established to ply to and fro, through the canal, between the Atlantic coast cities and cities of the Pacific coast, primarily for the purpose of enabling visitors to the exposition to inspect said canal."

I ran back with the coat, put it on its hook among a number of others and, ensconcing myself behind a door opening against a corner of the room, stood ready for the spying. I soon tired of standing and took a seat on the floor, there being just room enough for me to sit.

An hour passed, and, though several persons came in for their coats, none took mine. Then there was a long interval, during which no one came. Before that interval was broken I had fallen asleep. Awaking with a start, I looked for my overcoat. Running to it, I thrust my hand into the pocket where the dummy had been put.

It was impossible for me to face Mr. Humber that night. Taking the overcoat with me, I went home to find my mother and sister waiting for me.

They were both very much troubled at my appearance and greatly excited when I told them the story.

I went to bed, but all desire to sleep had been driven out of me. I remained awake till dawn, and my mother awakened me half an hour later.

"Get up, my son," she said. "We have a clew to the thief."

I sprang out of bed, dressed and after swallowing a cup of coffee went to the factory. When Mr. Humber saw me he looked relieved.

"I thought you had failed me," he said.

I told him the story of my going to sleep on watch. Then I added:

"My sister found a clew in the pocket of the coat last night after I went to bed. She will not trust me with it after my carelessness last night, but says she will give it to any one you may send for it."

Cookery Points

Birthday Cake.—When a child's birthday happens to fall on a special holiday the colors appropriate to that occasion can be used in the candles—as buff and blue for the 22d of February, red, white and blue for the Independence day child and holly painted candles for the Christmas birthday cake.

Wonderful color combinations can be made with colored icings—put on with a pastry tube in designs—and candies to harmonize or form a contrast.

Every child should be given the privilege of cutting his own birthday cake.

Cunning birthday cakes of tiny proportions can be bought for baby's first birthday. The one candle is larger than those used later and sometimes can be bought with the child's first name decorating it in gilt letters.

Sponge cake or a simple cup cake batter is the best birthday cake for young children, as many mothers are fussy about their children eating rich food.

Potato Cake.

Potato cake is not the plebeian pastry that it sounds. Made according to the following rule, it is worthy to hobnob with the most aristocratic sounding dainty. Cream together two cups of granulated sugar and a cupful of butter.

Work in a cupful of hot mashed potato, a cupful of English walnuts chopped fine, half a cupful of sweet milk, two cupfuls of flour, four eggs beaten light, five teaspoonfuls of melted chocolate and a tablespoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves.

Add two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and bake in layers. Put together with marshmallow filling.

Cocoa Sauce.

Cocoa sauce is liked with Dutch apple cake by at least one family. For the sauce a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter are melted in a saucepan, and then there is stirred in two tablespoonfuls of flour and two teaspoons of cocoa that have been sifted together.

A cupful of hot water is added gradually, and the sauce is cooked until it thickens. Then a quarter of a cupful of sugar is turned in and a teaspoonful of vanilla and a pinch of salt. More cocoa may be used if the sauce is to be served with a plain dessert like cottage pudding.

Codfish Souffle.

Soak the prepared salt codfish for three hours, then boil for twenty minutes, drain and set away until cold. Measure the fish and to two cups of it allow one cupful of mashed potatoes. Mix well, beating in one cup of milk and the yolks of three eggs, well whipped. Add a tablespoonful of melted butter, salt and white pepper to taste and three tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese. Turn into a buttered baking dish, sprinkle grated cheese over the top and bake to a golden brown. Serve immediately.

Potato Griddlecakes.

Twelve large potatoes, three heaping tablespoons of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one or two eggs, two teacups of boiling milk. The potatoes are peeled, washed and grated into a little cold water (which keeps them white); then strain off the water and pour on boiling milk, stir in eggs, salt and flour mixed with baking powder; if agreeable flavor with a fine chopped onion. Bake like any other pancake, allowing a little more lard or butter. Serve with stewed or preserved fruit.

Eggs a la Goldenrod.

Three hard boiled eggs, one cup milk, five circular pieces of toast, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth spoon pepper. Make a thin white sauce of milk, butter, flour, salt and pepper; separate yolks from whites of eggs, chop whites and add to sauce. Arrange toast on platter, pour sauce over, force the yolks through strainer, sprinkling over the toast. Garnish with parsley.

Molasses Cookies.

Put into a saucepan one cupful of molasses, then allow it to cool, add two well beaten eggs, half a teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of boiling water, then stir in lightly one pound of sifted flour. Roll out, cut out with a round cutter and bake in a hot oven.

Hot wheat pancakes are delicious for a simple midday meal when served with quince jelly.

Sinking Man Fails to Recognize Wife and Passes Away Without Regaining Consciousness—Remained Under the Ban of Church.

Astapova.—Surrounded by his wife, children, Doctor Makovetsky and the other attending physicians Count Leo Tolstoi passed away peacefully at 6:30 Sunday morning in the lonesome little railway station of the town.

Efforts of the church to gather the famous reformer into its folds effected nothing, as neither side yielded.

It was recognized long before his death that his case was hopeless.

Several of the physicians were greatly overcome by the approaching death of Russia's great writer.

His heart beat its last apparently without a clear moment to enable him to say farewell or cast a forgiving look upon his wife and children.

Tolstoi, accompanied only by Doctor Makovetsky, left his home at Yasnya Poliana for the purpose of ending his days in solitude, to which he more and more inclined during his later years. His pilgrimage led him to the monastery at Shamardine, in the province of Kaluga, where he remained as the guest of his sister, Maria, who is a nun in the cloister.

Learning that his retreat had been discovered, he insisted upon proceeding on his journey to the Caucasus, where he hoped to spend his last days close to the Tolstoyan colony on the shores of the Black Sea.

SYNOPSIS.

At a private view of the Chatworth personal estate, to be sold at auction, the Crew Idol mysteriously disappears. Judge Cressy, who was present, describes the ring to his friend Flora Gilsey, and she guesses Mrs. Clara Britton, as being like a heathen god, with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman. In discussing the disappearance of the ring, the exploits of an English thief, Farrell Wand, are recalled. Kerr tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere, but cannot place him. $20,000 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese jeweler's to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora is startled by the effect on Kerr when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. This possibility that the stone is part of the Crew Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen, Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Flora refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr, and suspects him of being the thief. She decides to return the ring to Harry, but he tells her to keep it for a day or two. Ella Bulter tells Flora that Clara is setting her cap for her father, Judge Buller. Flora believes Harry suspects Kerr and is about to make the secret known before unmasking the thief. Kerr and Clara confess their love for each other. Clara is followed by a Chinaman. Harry admits to Flora that he knew the ring was stolen. He attempts to take it from her. Flora goes to the San Mateo place with Mrs. Herrick and writes Kerr and Clara to come.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

It was plain to Flora from the moment she set foot over the threshold that the house was to be no mean ally of theirs, but Mrs. Herrick was making it help them doubly in their hard interval of waiting. Alone together with unspoken, unspeakable things between them—things that for mere decency of honor could not be uttered—with nothing but these to talk of, nothing but each other to talk at, they must yet, in sheer desperation and suspense, have inevitably burst out with question and confession, had not the great house been there to interpose its personality. And the way Mrs. Herrick was making the most of that! The way immediately, even before she had shown anything, she began to revivify the spirit of the place, as the two women stood with their hats not yet off in the room that was to be Flora's talking and looking out upon the lawn!

Flora faltered. "After whom?" There flashed through her mind more than one person that, by this time, Clara might possibly be after. "Why, after papa, of course!" Ella's injured surprise brought her back to the romance of Judge Buller. Her voice rose in sheer bewilderment. "Well?"

Ella's voice rose triumphantly. "I got it out of her myself. I just came right out to her at last. She seemed awfully surprised that I knew; but she owned up to it, and what do you think? I bought her off!"

"Bought her off?" Flora cried. Each fact that Ella brought forth seemed to her more preposterous than the last.

"Why, yes, it's too ridiculous; what do you think she wanted?"

At that question Flora's heart seemed fairly to stand still. That was the very question she had been asking herself for days, and asking in vain.

Ella's voice was coming to her faint as a voice from another world. "She wanted that little, little picture—that picture of the man called Farrell Wand. Don't you remember, papa mentioned it at supper that evening at the club? Isn't it funny she remembered it all this time? Well, she wanted it dreadfully, but Harry wanted it, too, and papa said he had promised it to Harry; but I got it first and gave it to her." Ella's voice ended in a high note of triumph.

Flora, if anything, rose higher in despair. "Oh, Ella!"

"Doesn't it seem ridiculous?" Ella argued, "that if she really wanted him she'd give him up for that?"

"Oh, no—I mean yes." Flora stammered. "Yes, of course! thank you Ella, very much—very much." The last words were hardly audible. The receiver fell jangling into its bracket, and Flora leaned against the wall by the telephone and closed her eyes.

For a moment all she could see was Clara with that little, little picture. How well she could remember how Clara had looked that night of the club supper!

From the moment Judge Buller had spoken of the picture, how all three of them had changed, Clara and Kerr and Harry. Everything that had seemed so phantasmal then, everything she had put down as a figment of her own imagination, had meant just this plain fact. All three of them had wanted the picture. For his own reason, Kerr had turned aside from the chase, but Harry had stood with it to the last, and now, when finally the prize had been assured to him, Clara had it!

At this moment she had it in her hand. At this moment she knew what was the aspect of the figure in the picture, whether it showed a face, and, if a face, whose. Flora's hands opened and closed. "Oh," she whispered to the great silence of the great house awaiting him; "where is he? Why isn't he here?"

All those terrible things which might be happening beyond her last chance to save himself from capture. She found she hadn't a thing left unsaid, an argument left unanswered.

The wind, which had fallen with approaching evening, was only a whisper among the trees. The greenish-white bodies of statues in the shrubbery glowed ruddy. Gathering their skirts from the grass that glittered with the drops of the last shower, arm in arm the two women walked down the broad central gravel drive between ribbon beds of flowers. From here numerous paths paved with white stone went wandering under snowball trees and wild apple, losing themselves in shrubbery. But one made a clear turn across the lawn for the rose-garden, where in the midst a round pool of water lay like a flaming bit of the sunset day. Among the bushes, red and rose and white, the elder woman in her black, the younger in her gown more glowing, with a veil over her hair, walked, and, loitering, looked down into the water, seeing their faces reflected, and, behind, the tangled brambles and the crimson sky. They did not speak, but at last their companionship was peaceful, was perfect.

Loud and shrill and shriller and more piercing, from the west wing of the house, overhanging the garden, the sound reached them—an alarm that set Flora's heart to leaping. Started apart, they listened.

"Would that be—is that for you?"

"I think it's for me."

The words came from them simultaneously, and almost at the same instant Flora had started across the lawn. The sight of an aproned maid coming out on the veranda and peering down the garden set her running feebly.

"It's a telephone for Miss Gilsey," the girl said.

"Oh, thank you," Flora panted.

She knew so well the voice she had expected at the other end of the wire that the husky, boyish note which reached her, attenuated by distance, struck her with dismay and disappointment.

"Ella, oh, yes; yes; Ella." What was she saying? Ella was using the telephone as if it were a cabinet for secrets.

"Clara told me you were down there," she was explaining. "I saw her this morning, yes. Well—and she could hear Ella draw in her breath—"I'm so relieved! I thought you'd be, too, to know. I was perfectly right. She was after him."

Flora faltered. "After whom?" There flashed through her mind more than one person that, by this time, Clara might possibly be after.

"Why, after papa, of course!" Ella's injured surprise brought her back to the romance of Judge Buller. Her voice rose in sheer bewilderment. "Well?"

Flora, if anything, rose higher in despair. "Oh, Ella!"

"Doesn't it seem ridiculous?" Ella argued, "that if she really wanted him she'd give him up for that?"

"Oh, no—I mean yes." Flora stammered. "Yes, of course! thank you Ella, very much—very much." The last words were hardly audible. The receiver fell jangling into its bracket, and Flora leaned against the wall by the telephone and closed her eyes.

For a moment all she could see was Clara with that little, little picture. How well she could remember how Clara had looked that night of the club supper!

From the moment Judge Buller had spoken of the picture, how all three of them had changed, Clara and Kerr and Harry. Everything that had seemed so phantasmal then, everything she had put down as a figment of her own imagination, had meant just this plain fact. All three of them had wanted the picture. For his own reason, Kerr had turned aside from the chase, but Harry had stood with it to the last, and now, when finally the prize had been assured to him, Clara had it!

At this moment she had it in her hand. At this moment she knew what was the aspect of the figure in the picture, whether it showed a face, and, if a face, whose. Flora's hands opened and closed. "Oh," she whispered to the great silence of the great house awaiting him; "where is he? Why isn't he here?"

All those terrible things which might be happening beyond her reach processional before her. Had Clara already snapped the trap of the law upon Kerr? And if she hadn't yet, what could be done to hold her off? Flora turned again to the telephone. Slowly she took down the receiver and gave into the bright mouthpiece of the instrument the number of her own house.

Presently the voice of Shima spoke to her. Mrs. Britton had gone out to dinner.

"Tell her, Shima," Flora commanded, "tell her to come down on the earliest train." She hesitated, then finished in a firm voice. "Tell her not to do anything until she has seen me."

Shima would tell her—but Mrs. Britton had been out all day. He did not know when she would be back.

The words sounded ominous in Flora's ears. She turned away. Was everything to be finished just as she had light enough to move, but before she had a chance?

The sound of spinning wheels on the drive started her to fresh hope, and sent her hurrying down the stairs. It was the phantom returning from the last train. Through the open door she saw the figure of Mrs. Herrick expectant on the veranda. Then the carriage came into the porte-cochère and passed. With a rush she reached the veranda, and stood there looking after it. She wouldn't believe her eyes—she couldn't—that it had returned again empty.

Mrs. Herrick's voice was asking her. "What shall we do? Shall we serve dinner now, or wait a little longer?"

"Oh, it's no use," Flora murmured. "He won't come to-night. He'll never come." She drooped against the tall porch pillar.

"My poor child!" Mrs. Herrick took her passive hand. If she read in the profound discouragement of Flora's face that something more had transpired than a mere non-appearance, she did not show it, but waited, alert and quiet, while they gazed together out over the darkening garden.

They clung to each other, peering timidously down the drive. A little gust of wind took the garden, and before the trees had ceased to tremble and whiten a man had emerged from their shadow and was advancing upon them up the middle of the drive.

Flora's heart leaped at sight of him. All her impulse was to fly to meet him, but she felt Mrs. Herrick's hand tighten upon her wrist as if it divined her madness.

His light stick a-swing in his hand, his step free and incatious as ever, gray and slender and seeming to look more at the ground than at them, the two women watched him drawing near. His was the seeming of a quiet guest at the quietest of house parties. To meet him Flora saw she must meet him on the high ground of his reserve. As he came under the light of the porte-cochère his look, his greeting, his hand, were first for Mrs. Herrick.

"We were afraid we had missed you altogether," said she.

"It was I who somehow missed your carriage, was hardly expecting to be expected at such an hour."

Flora watched them meeting each other so gallantly with a trembling compunction. Mrs. Herrick, who trusted her, was giving her hand in sublime ignorance. It was vain that Flora told herself she had given warning. She knew she had thrown the ing, saw both men, also uprisen, hang hesitatingly, as if unready to be deserted; yet with well-filled glasses, and newly smoking tobacco, both were caught.

Then Kerr, with a quick dash of his hand, picked up his glass. "Let us be continental," he begged, and followed close at Flora's side. Without moving his lips Kerr was speaking. "What does this mean?"

She sensed the anger in his smooth-ered voice, but she dared not look at him.

"I have no idea; but I will see you."

"When?"

Her answer leaped to her mind and her lips at the same moment.

"In the rotunda when the house is quiet."

Harry had followed leisurely in their wake. The flush of haste had subsided in his face, and when the four regrouped themselves in the high, darkly-paneled room, among the low lights, Flora remarked his extraordinary composure. Bitter he might be; but all the nervousness, suspicion, uneasiness, that he had shown of late had vanished. There was a tremendous confidence about him, the confidence of the player who holds cards that must win the game, and sits back waiting for his moment.

But she was ready to laugh at him in his security. He had underestimated his opponent. In spite of him she was to have her meeting with Kerr!

Harry had waited too long to prevent that, whatever he might do afterward. In this inspired moment she felt herself touching conquering heights which before she had only touched in imagination.

She felt enough power in herself to move even such a mountain of obstinacy as Kerr. She stole a look at him—a look of glad intelligence. He understood as if she had spoken. They were to meet, while all the house slept fast, to meet for his great renunciation. Then, in the morning, when Harry was ready with whatever move he was holding back, Kerr would be gone. There would be no Kerr—but she must not think of that!

She glanced at him again in the thick of the talk, and caught his eye upon her, puzzled, and, she thought, with a glimmer of doubt.

In the room where, some eight hours before, she and Mrs. Herrick had talked, Flora waited, fully dressed. It had been early when they had separated. The strain of the four together had been terrific; and she was still feeling it, though an hour had passed. She was feeling that, now her situation was upon her, she was alone. Mrs. Herrick could only be near her, not with her, and Kerr was still an unknown quantity—except that he was fire.

And there was Harry, with his terrible certainty, and no apparent thing to account for it. It could not be there were men in the house without the servants remarking it; but in the garden? She peered out upon it. Only tree shadows moved upon the lawn. Nothing glimmered in the walks or drives. The solitude held her like an enchantment. She listened for the small sounds in the house to cease, for the lights in the lower story to go out, proclaiming all the servants were in bed. Even after the stillness she waited—waited to be sure it was the long stillness.

Finally she crept to the door and opened it boldly wide.

She stood where she was upon the threshold trembling in a cruel fright. A gas-jet burning far up at the end of the hall, threw a dim light down the pale, pinkish, naked vista, void of furniture, window or curtain; and, leaning against the blank wall almost opposite her door, and directly facing her, was Harry.

Without speaking they looked at each other. He was fully dressed, but lacking his shoes, as she noted in the acuteness of her startled senses. The furtive suggestion of those shoeless feet struck her with horror—formless, unreasoning. It was like an evil dream to find him there, stolen to her door in the night, waiting outside it without a sound, looking her steadily, hardly in the eye without a word.

She tried to speak, but, with terror sobbing in her throat, the words failed. She made a step forward with a crazy impulse to rush past him.

He straightened, with a quick movement toward her. She recoiled before him, precipitately retreated, closed the door, shot the bolt, and leaned, for faintness, against the wall. She expected each moment to hear him tap. She neither heard a knock nor the sound of soft, departing feet. He was still there! He was on guard! He had good reason for his terrible certainty! He had foreseen what her plan might be, and she knew he would no more let her get past him down the hall than the turnkey will let the wretched prisoner escape.

Clara stood still, even after the door had closed upon Harry, and oddly, and rather horribly, she wore the same aspect she had worn the day when she had looked intently and absorbingly upon the rifled contents of Flora's room.

long as she had the sapphire upon her. She recalled fearfully the moment when she had crouched against the window with her hand protecting the jewel, and Harry's hand grasping her wrist. He would know well enough where to find it now. Oh, the restless unconcealable thing! Where could she hide it?

She took the pear-shaped pouch in their wake that swung always before her on her long gold chain. She had repudiated that hiding-place before, but now that the more obvious the better—now that both men supposed she carried the jewel far hidden out of sight. Without removing from the bed where she was crouched, cramped and cold, she made the exchange, leaving the chain still around her neck, dropping the jewel into the pouch, where it would swing free, so carelessly dangling as to be beyond suspicion, but never beyond the reach of her hand.

It was a pale, splendid dawning full of clouds when she fell asleep.

Broad sunlight filled her room when she was awakened by a knocking at her door. She sprang from the bed and went to it. She was not to be come in upon by any unwelcome visitor. But it was Mrs. Herrick; and Flora, with a murmur of relief, since this was the one person she did want to see, drew her inside.

"Why, my child, you haven't slept, at least not properly." Mrs. Herrick herself looked anxious and weary. "I've come to tell you that Mrs. Britton is here. She came an hour ago."

"Where is she?"

"In the breakfast-room with Mr. Cressy."

"Oh," Flora cried, "you know I didn't expect them. I didn't want them. It wasn't for them I asked you to come."

"But can't you tell me what it is you're afraid of?" the other urged.

"Between us can't we prevent it? Is there nothing I can do to help you?"

"Ah, if you knew how much you have already helped me by just being here."

JOINING LIMBS OF A TREE

Select Two Small Branches Growing Opposite and Twine Them Together Horizontally.

When a tree is small, but with sufficient growth, select two small branches growing opposite and as near the crotch as possible, as shown at A in the sketch, and twine them together horizontally, one overlapping the other as a rope is twisted, leaving the ends free as in B. It will take about a year for nature to join them, writes D. English in Popular Mechanics. Then prune the ends off smooth and in time as the bark expands through the growth of the tree the connection will become as one solid piece, C, thereby binding the limbs together. This method may be used several times in one tree. Trees treated in this manner will not split through rapid growth or by the wind. This method can be applied to all fruit trees except the peach tree.

NO SURPLUS OF GOOD FRUIT

So Great Is Demand for Best Grades of Stock That It Is Always More or Less Scarce.

(By C. R. BARNES.)
It is an interesting fact that the great extension of fruit growing in all parts of the country has been attended, not by a decline in prices, but by a very considerable advance. The question whether or not the multiplication of orchards and berry patches will have the effect of producing a glut, so as to render profitless the labor and expenditures of the fruit grower, seems, then, very likely to meet a negative reply.

In the first place the demand for all the fruits of North America is world-wide. The world's appetite for them is insatiable; and as the facilities for distributing them are better systematized through intelligent cooperative arrangements between growers and transportation agencies, and selling agencies in the city, it seems as though the problem is to be, not how to get rid of surpluses, but how to get enough of any kind of good fruit. In years of great abundance in American apple orchards, good apples have sold in Mexico at 15 cents apiece. In London they have retailed at 25 cents apiece. Other fruits, capable of bearing transportation for long distances, have commanded proportionately high prices. Of course, these prices have been for choice fruit. In New York and Boston, even 10 and 15 cents apiece has been readily obtainable for choice apples.

Such exceptional figures are not, however, necessary as a basis for profitable fruit growing. The moderate prices paid by the mass of American consumers are sufficiently high for that.

It would seem then, that the grower need only see to it that his fruit is of good quality, attractively put up and intelligently marketed, to be certain of a reasonable reward. But the day when neglected orchards and bushes could be depended upon to produce salable crops has passed. The grower of today must be equipped by study for battling with insect pests; must be insistent in cultivation and in the use of the sprayer; and must, in short, give as close attention to his trees as the stockman does to his cattle.

The Pig and the Orchard.
The two go together well. The pig stirs up the soil about the trees, letting in the sunshine and moisture to the roots and fertilizing them, while devouring many grubs that would otherwise prey upon the fruit. But many orchards cannot be fenced and many owners of fenced orchards, even, would like to have the pig confine his efforts around the trunk of each tree. To secure this have four fence panels made and yard the pig for a short time in succession about each tree.

Many Dangers Menace Trees.
The apple tree has a hard time of it, surely. The Malhe station enumerates as many as 23 insects that injure apple trees. Some of these are more serious than others; for instance, San Jose scale and the codling moth do more damage than the plant lice. When the various fungous diseases are counted in, this is a pretty strenuous existence for the apple tree.

SEVERAL ENEMIES OF APPLE

Bitter Rot or Anthracnose Seriously Impairs Both Eating and Keeping Qualities of Fruit.

Bitter Rot or Anthracnose.—In recent years this fungus has been investigated and its survival in the nursery fruits and cankered branches proved.

This bitter-rot is also a ripe rot and the disease develops in the later season and seriously impairs both the eating and keeping qualities.

For its control the destruction of all nursery fruits and attention to branch cankers are necessary in addition to the application of sprays. Since we know the life history of the fungus better it has been possible to control bitter-rot successfully under orchard conditions as the annual sources of infection by nursery fruit and cankers have been mastered.

Fly-Speck Fungus.—This disease in ordinary seasons appears chiefly upon apples grown in low, moist situations. During wet seasons some varieties are liable to be spotted by this parasite whatever may be the location of the trees.

Aside from selecting high, sunny situations for the apple orchard, spraying with Bordeaux mixture will prevent this disease.

Storage Rots.—These rots of the apple are extremely various since apples infected before storage are liable to develop during storage the forms of rot due to that infection. Even bitter-rot may not be overlooked in this way and much more commonly still, black-rot and the rots which develop from the gradual invasion of molds. It is found, furthermore, that bruises upon the apple or any tendency to sun scald phenomena give dead tissues in which various organisms that normally hasten decay will do their work with rapidity. It is understood, of course, that the temperatures of storage will regulate or control more or less perfectly the rate of this development.

Growing Berries.
You must not forget that all berries are forest fruits, and generally grow in the shade and are great lovers of moisture.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Now is a good time to apply manure to raspberries, currants, gooseberries, etc.

As long as the soil remains unfrozen, continue to hoe and cultivate the strawberry bed.

All weeds and dead branches should be cleared out of the small fruit gardens and burned.

Where ground freezing is to be expected straw mulch will protect the roots of the orchard trees.

There is scarcely a farm apple orchard in existence that cannot be renovated to a profitable purpose.

Brush and rubbish left in the orchard is a hiding place for insects, let alone being unsightly and untidy.

Young trees will grow later in the fall than older ones, and the sap-run should be checked as early as possible.

A covey of quail in an orchard will prove a good friend to the grower, because they eat a tremendous number of insects.

Attractive flower beds add much to the charm of the flower garden. Coleus, salvia and phlox are well adapted for bedding purposes.

In the extreme north fruit growers find that it is much better practice to cultivate the orchards from the beginning to the end of the season.

In filling apple barrels, fill until the last layer stands an inch above the chime of the barrel. This ensures solidity when the head is pressed down carefully.

When the ground freezes hard enough to hold up a wagon, is the time to mulch the strawberry bed with straw or marsh hay. Don't be in too much of a hurry.

Late in the fall plow a furrow down through the orchard between every two rows of trees if the ground is apt to be wet. The trees will do a great deal better for this drainage.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

BERNHARDT STILL YOUTHFUL

The emotional, fervid and ever youthful Bernhardt is once again in our midst. With a repertoire of 24 plays, she will tour this country for six months and will then visit Cuba and Mexico. Of course, "the Divine Sarah"—how many million times has she been called that?—has made the inevitable statement that this is her farewell tour, but American theater-goers are hardened, disillusioned. The most trusting patron of the drama, whose wide-eyed belief in the truth of many stage legends is almost pathetic, becomes cynical and peevish when the term "farewell tour" is used in connection with any celebrity, most of all Sarah of the burnished tresses. Sarah has "farewelled" too often.

But when you get right down to it, who wants her to retire, anyway? When a woman of 67 can play the part of a lithe lad of 19—play it wonderfully, with all the grace and vivacity which the role demands—why should she retire? Why shouldn't she go right on playing until she's 100 if she wants to? If Sarah has this idea in mind—and certainly it seems that she has—she can count on Americans backing her up for many a long year to come.

It has been said, in fact one reads it in every account of Mme. Bernhardt's career, that she looks barely half her age. That, of course, isn't so; to say that the world-famous French actress appears to be only about 34 off the stage "in real life" is an exaggeration. But that her figure is as slender and straight as any girl's, her eyes bright and her complexion clear and healthy, cannot be denied.

Interested in every question of the day, well informed on many of them, a sculptor, painter and poet of no mean ability, as well as the greatest living actress, Sarah Bernhardt is a wonderfully interesting individual. One quality which she possesses to a marked degree is seldom mentioned and that is her womanliness—motherliness perhaps expresses this characteristic better. Those near and dear to her—her son and his wife and the little grandchild to whom she is devoted for instance—do not know her as "brilliant," "fascinating," "intense," but merely as a tender-hearted woman of many lovable qualities.

GOVERNMENT HEALTH ADVISER

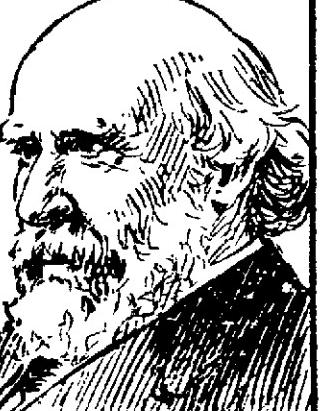

When Theodore Roosevelt discovered some years ago that the Panama Canal could never be built until the yellow fever plague was conquered, he appointed a commission of medical men to discover the cause of the scourge and the means of preventing it. The splendid work of that commission everybody knows; but not everyone is aware that the members of the commission were named by a private citizen. Dr. William H. Welch of Baltimore. Dr. Welch has occupied for years the unique position of unofficial adviser to the United States government in all large matters relating to the public health. There is hardly a single body that has to do with the national health which does not include Dr. Welch among its members.

As president of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York, Human Life says, he has helped to inspire many of the great discoveries which have come out of that laboratory from Dr. Simon Flexner and others. Not long ago the Carnegie Institution in Washington needed a chairman for its executive committee, which has general oversight of all the Institution's manifold scientific activities. Dr. Welch was elected, and although the Carnegie research workers are busy with many other problems besides those of medicine, he takes almost as much interest in the institution's new non-magnetic yacht and its observatory in the Andes as in his own particular subject.

As a pathologist Dr. Welch has won a world-wide reputation. Occupying the professorship in this science at Johns Hopkins University since its foundation, he has made during the last twenty-five years many important contributions to our knowledge of diphtheria, typhoid fever, malaria, Asiatic cholera, kidney troubles, and other diseases.

J. J. HILL 72 YEARS OLD

James J. Hill, of St. Paul, celebrated his 72d birthday anniversary a few days ago. The heading reads, "J. J. Hill, 72 Years Old." Perhaps it would have been nearer correct if it read, "James J. Hill, 72 Years Young." If there is another man in the United States who has passed the allotted time of three score years and ten, and, having done as much work in his lifetime as James J. Hill, "Empire Builder of the Northwest," still retains as keen an intellect and can yet do as much important work in a day, St. Paul would like to know who he is.

Mr. Hill's son, Louis W. Hill, as president of the Great Northern railroad, has relieved his father of much work, but in the office of president of the board, James J. Hill finds enough to do to keep him busy every day. His hand is still on the helm and nothing escapes his notice. Evidence of Mr. Hill's keenness of mind was amply given in the address he delivered before the National Conservation Congress in St. Paul. Some of the epigrams contained in that address will be quoted in years to come.

Mr. Hill's St. Paul home is on Summit avenue, a residence street equalling in beauty any in the world. From the rear of his house Mr. Hill has a view of the Mississippi river and the beautiful bluffs beyond that provides a picture no artist could truthfully portray. In his home are priceless collections of art.

"During the big conservation congress in St. Paul recently," said Mr. Hill, "we talked about conserving water and conserving land; conserving coal and conserving iron; it's too bad somebody didn't say a word about conserving common sense. That's what the country needs right now—to conserve common sense."

JUDGE WHO TRIED CRIPPEN

Lord Alverstone, chief justice of England, is the judge before whom Dr. Harvey H. Crippen was tried for the murder of his wife, and it was he who sentenced the American dentist to be hanged. Lord Alverstone is regarded in England as having exceptional judicial ability. He was born in December, 1842, the second son of Thomas Webster, Q. C., and Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Richard Calthrop, Swineshead Abbey, Lincolnshire.

He was educated at King's College School, at Charterhouse, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he was Scholar, thirty-fifth Wrangler, and third-class Classic. He became a barrister in 1868; joined the South-Eastern Service circuit; later, was appointed Tubman, and, after that, Postman, of the Court of Exchequer. He took silk ten years after he was called. In 1880 he contested Bewdley, and five years later he became M. P. for Launceston. From the same year until 1900, when he was appointed Lord Chief Justice of England, he was M. P. (Conservative) for the Isle of Wight. He was attorney-general from 1885 to 1886, from 1886 to 1892, and from 1895 to 1900. In the last-named year he became Master of the Rolls. In 1872 he married Louisa, only daughter of William Calthrop, of Withern, Lincolnshire.

The first part of the lord chief justice's summing up in the celebrated case consisted of an analysis of Crippen's own story. After telling the jurors they must be satisfied upon the evidence the crown had made out, or otherwise the prisoner was entitled to acquittal, Lord Alverstone said the jury would agree that Crippen, if guilty, was an extraordinary man, who had committed a ghastly crime and had covered it up in most brutal and callous manner. If Crippen was innocent, the judge declared, it was impossible to fathom his mind.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect breathing, and the air passes through the nostril and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the nostrils.

We will send you a Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Kidding Worse Than Cutting.

Talk about making good with your friends, a New Orleans man told everybody he knew that he was going to Philadelphia for the dual purpose of seeing the world's baseball series and having a slight surgical operation performed. Reaching this city, he consulted a specialist, and was told that an operation was not necessary.

"But, doctor," the New Orleans party urgently interposed, "it must be done."

"Why must it?" wonderingly queried the surgeon.

"Because," was the startling rejoinder of the Southern man, "I told all the boys at home that I was going to have an operation performed, and if I don't make good they will kid the life out of me."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

On the Senators.

The wit of Bishop Seth Ward amuses Nashville frequently.

Bishop Ward, in company with two senators, came forth from a Nashville reception the other day and entered a waiting motor car.

"Ah, bishop," said one of his companions, "you are not like your master. He was content to ride an ass."

"Yes, and so should I be," Bishop Ward answered, "but there's no such animal to be got nowadays. They make them all senators."

At the One Horse.

Jere L. Sullivan, the head of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International alliance, said in Cincinnati, apropos of Labor day:

"Our American hotels are better than they used to be, and for this betterment my organization deserves no little credit.

"We have today no such hotels as the One Horse of Tin Can, where, if you asked for a bath, they used to give you a shovel and tell you to go down to the hollow and dam the creek.

"An English earl once visited the One Horse hotel. The landlord without ceremony led him outside, pointed to a window on the fifth floor, and said:

"That's your room."

Schurz Was Sure of Him.

Carl Schurz was dining one night with a man who had written a book of poems, so called, and who was pleased with himself.

The poet was discoursing on the time-worn topic of politics of the men who take office.

"I consider politics and politicians beneath my notice," he said. "I do not care for office. I wouldn't be a senator or cabinet officer, and I doubt if I could be tempted by the offer of the presidency. For the matter of that, I would rather be known as a third-rate poet than a first-rate statesman."

"Well, aren't you?" Schurz shouted at him.

HEALTH AND INCOME Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding-house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day.

"Today, I am free from brain-tire, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an over-worked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income."
